Don attended Gonzaga University in Spokane, Washington and graduated from the University of California Los Angeles with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Economics.

Following in the footsteps of his father, Don became a financial advisor in 1983. Don has been working with individuals and small company retirement plans ever since.

Don believes it is his job to understand the financial goals and objectives for each of the clients he serves. By providing them with customized investment advice and financial planning that is tailored to their individual needs, he strives to build portfolios that will meet their objectives while minimizing risk. This is a dynamic process that needs to incorporate changes through time. As the priorities and circumstances of his clients change, he continues to monitor their progress towards achieving their goals and updates their investments when necessary.

Don lives in Vancouver, Washington with his wife Ginny and his two daughters.
